Chapter 1 by Melissa Vallejo

It was a quiet day in the city of Smallville. This is a small city that is not even on the map and has the population of 41. I live on a block where all the neighbors get along and where there is always barbeques (Which I love). One day a weird plane came across our town. Everything seemed normal until that day. Once that plane passed by everything turned all white, like someone was shining a light into your eyes.

*No electricity*

I opened my eyes and blinked a couple of times. It seemed as if everything was still normal. As it got darker we noticed that the power went out in the whole city we couldn't even make phone calls. We put on the candles. I went outside to go play with the other kids. It was 5:00. We were outside with our parents since the light poles weren't on. They were all sitting in a circle with their fancy looking chairs. Everything was fine until we heard a woman screaming. Everyone got out of their seats and looked down the street. It was too dark to see who it was.
